

Information Article

Civil Aviation Accidents - Guidelines for Assistance to Victims and their Families

Relevance

'Best Practice + ICAO Recommended Practice' - Indonesia

Note - This information article is based on an 'official' document published (Sep 2014) by Indonesia's air accident investigation authority - the latter known (in English) as the 'National Transportation Safety Committee' - (in fact, this committee is also responsible for other forms of transport disaster involving Indonesia i.e. road, rail and maritime)

Whilst not (apparently) covered by Indonesian legislation, regulation (or being similar to the semi-formal 'code of conduct' as used in Australia) - this Indonesian document nevertheless appears to carry some degree of 'official' weight. In this information article this has been loosely termed as 'best practice'

Furthermore, it may also be seen as complying with the International Civil Aviation Organisation's (ICAO) subsequent 'recommended practice' (became effective 25 Feb 2016) for the vast majority of States (Countries) in the world to establish plans for such assistance to be provided to air accident victims + families

The required Indonesian document can be found by following the below link:

www.aviationemergencyresponseplan.com/information

When the webpage opens, scroll down the list of info articles shown until you reach:

* Information Article - Humanitarian (Family) Assistance - Statutory and Best Practice Requirements - China; EU; Hong Kong; Indonesia 1; Indonesia 2; Italy

Click on 'Indonesia 2' - to open and read

The information contained in this information article is provided on an 'as is' basis, without any warranty of any kind. Whilst reasonable care has been taken in the document's preparation, the author shall have no liability whatsoever to any person or entity - with respect to any loss, damage, injury and / or death etc. caused (actual or allegedly) directly or indirectly, by any use whatsoever of such information

Readers are respectfully requested to please report any errors, omissions and / or oversights in this information article to:

info@aviationerp.com

